Ingles Group success at HIA awards

GOLD Coast home builder Ingles Homes has continued its success at the annual regional awards for the Housing Industry Association.

The Surfers Paradise-headquartered company, which is proudly owned by the Ingles family, won three of the 19 awards announced at the Gold Coast Convention Centre on Saturday night.

Part of the Ingles Group, Ingles Homes won the award for the best project home worth up to $250,000, the Project Home of the Year, and the best new kitchen project for up to $20,000.

It was the Ingles Homes-designed Jordana, a two storey, four bedroom home built at Arundel, which claimed two of the titles. The award winning home was built at Golden Bear Drive for a Gold Coast family.

Ingles also won the best kitchen project for the Ingles Homes display home at Temple Island Circuit, Regatta Waters.

Mr Ingles said he was extremely proud of the company's achievements, which had come about as a result of many years of hard work.

"These awards are a reflection of the skills and abilities of the entire Ingles team," said Mr Ingles. "Without the right team you cannot win these awards year in, year out, as we have consistently done."

Mr Ingles said the company was continually striving to improve its product offerings.

Ingles Homes has launched a raft of new home designs to coincide with the launch of the Ingles Group's three Coomera residential projects.

These include the group's flagship, $500 million, 900-dwelling, Big Sky residential community, the neighbouring Coomera Parklands Stage Two and the boutique Saltwater project.

"People looking to buy at the three communities will have a huge range of new designs of contemporary house and land packages to choose from," said Mr Ingles.

"We are continually reviewing our designs to ensure our homes are among the best value in the market and create a haven that our customers are proud to call 'home'.

“With the latest redesigns, we earmarked a selection of Ingles top-selling homes, which we then transformed with the use of various external elements, including feature stonework, linea-style cladding and batten timber treatments.”
